

Resolution to Condemn the Use of Nuclear Weapons
as a Violation of International Law

Here we resolve:

Based on the experience of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, nuclear weapons are a totally immoral means of mass slaughter; they cannot coexist with human beings.

Existing international law established by the Hague Convention and other historical precedents all stand on principles of humanity, but nuclear weapons exist in absolute opposition to those principles.

Since 1961, the United Nations General Assembly has repeatedly adopted resolutions banning the use of nuclear weapons, stating that such use would constitute a crime against mankind and civilization.

Abolition of nuclear weapons is the desire of all peace-loving persons.

The International Court of Justice must recognize the tragedy wrought by nuclear destruction, the suffering and aftereffects still affecting survivors, and judge unequivocally that the development, possession and use of nuclear weapons violate international law.

October 17, 1995

4th Executive Conference of the World Conference of Mayors for Peace through Intercity Solidarity
Volgograd