Course Description:
We live in an age where technological, political, and economic factors have come together to create a world in which people from different cultures interact with one another on a regular basis. To function in this ever-changing world, we each need to develop the ability to communicate effectively with people whose beliefs, attitudes, and behaviors are totally different from ours. In this course, we will explore the relationship between communication and culture. Specifically, we will examine three aspects of this relationship: 1) We will explore the ways in which one culture's perceptions of another are shaped through interaction, 2) we will discover the ways in which culture is created and sustained through communication, and 3) we will discuss the ways in which culture constrains or shapes communication and behavior in general, with a particular focus on the health care professions.

The course will provide students with a cultural immersion experience that will prepare them to live and work in a society that is culturally different from their own. As a result of this experience, students will have a greater understanding of their own culture and that of eastern cultures, and Japan in particular. To meet this end, students will be immersed in Japanese culture while exploring in depth it’s communication and cultural patterns in health care (nursing, medicine, mental health, social work, public health). While our home base will be the Friends Center in Tokyo, we will make a 3-day excursion to Kyoto and Hiroshima. In Hiroshima, students will visit the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Museum and the Radiation Effect Research Foundation. They will also listen to testimonials of A-bomb survivors. Our course is certified as a Hiroshima - Nagasaki Peace Study Course by the cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki and the Hiroshima Peace Culture Foundation since the Hiroshima field trip is dedicated to peace study.

Course Objectives:
In keeping with the goals outlined above, this class has several specific learning objectives. Through the completion of this class, you should:

1. Develop an understanding of and appreciation for underlying dimensions of cultural variability.
2. Understand the role communication plays in shaping cultural values, beliefs, and practices.
3. Develop an awareness of the ways in which your own culture is shaped through communication and shapes the way you communicate, both verbally and non-verbally.
4. Understand the relationship between communication and culture in a variety of healthcare disciplines and contexts, including nursing, medicine, social work, psychology and public health.
5. Develop competencies needed to become more effective intercultural communicators and health care professionals.

PULS: Understanding Society and Culture
Intellectual Depth, Breadth, and Adaptiveness

RISE: International

Texts:
Reading materials and reference data are available in the Modules section of Canvas

Some Class rules:

All students are expected to be prepared and present for class, and to participate in class and group discussions whether online or in person.

The focus, when we are together in class is on face-to-face sharing. The primary benefits from the course come from discussion among students. No Electronics. No texting. All cell phones turned off during class; no laptops open during class.

Grading:

The grade will be based on attendance and participation, assignments, your e-portfolio, and a final report (one part focused on the student’s health profession of interest, and the other part is a summary and critique of cross-cultural learning).

It is very important that you attend every class and keep up with the reading so that you can participate fully in class discussions. You must post at least one question or comment on each reading in the Discussions section of Canvas, and come prepared to discuss your question or comment in class.

Coming to class and checking Canvas information regularly are your responsibilities to keep informed about what is going on in class. Class performance will be graded on the basis of the following criteria.

Attendance and Participation:

5 points: well-prepared, excellent performance
4 points: well-prepared, good performance
3 points: well-prepared, passing performance
2 points: evidence of preparation, but not as a satisfactory level
1 point: present, but unprepared
0 point: absent
Assignments will be graded as follows:
