Reports on the Youth Exchange for Peace Support Program 2019

Since 2016, Mayors for Peace has invited selected youths from various member cities to Hiroshima to participate in its Youth Exchange for Peace Support Program. The program aims to support young people from its member cities, financially and otherwise, in participating in programs run by Hiroshima City to share in the messages of the hibakusha, to discuss their message of peace, and to promote connections and friendships between participants from around the world. Support recipients participate in activities led by the Mayors for Peace Secretariat, including a briefing on the activities of Mayors for Peace, and a meeting between support recipients and the Secretariat.

Please visit the Mayors for Peace website and read the reports of representatives from member cities who participated in the two programs in Hiroshima last summer:

- HIROSHIMA and PEACE (July 30 – August 9, 2019)
- The International Youth Conference for Peace in the Future, 2019 Hiroshima (August 4 – August 12, 2019)

This year, Mayors for Peace will once again run this program to provide financial and other support to selected youth from member cities participating in “HIROSHIMA and PEACE”. We are currently accepting applications from member cities.

[Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia; December 10-14, 2019]

A member of the Mayors for Peace Secretariat staff was invited to join the Obama Foundation Leaders: Asia-Pacific program, and attended a convening held in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, from December 10-14.

<Mirano, Italy>
Report on the peace events in 2019
The City of Mirano, a member of Mayors for Peace since 2014, organized three peace events last year.

1) Flash mob on August 5th
On the occasion of the 74th anniversary of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, a series of peace events were held by “Tavolo Intercomunale per la Pace” (The Inter-communal Table for Peace), an association of cities for peace that involves five cities in northern Italy: Mira, Mirano, Noale, Salzano, Spinea. The City of Mirano organized a flashmob titled “Tu che ne sai di Hiroshima?” (‘What do you know about Hiroshima?’) performed in the main square of Mirano on August 5.

2) Planting of a second-generation A-bombed tree
In 2017, the City received seeds from a ginkgo biloba whose mother tree was exposed to the atomic bombing of Hiroshima. After that, the students of a local agricultural school named “8 marzo Lorenz” cultivated the seeds and on November 5th, nine of the seedlings were planted in Rabin Park, a city garden dedicated to peace. Mirano also donated three of the seedlings that the city had been growing to its neighbouring municipality Mira.

3) Inviting municipalities in the Metropolitan City of Venice to join Mayors for Peace
In December, Maria Rosa Pavanello (the Mayor of Mirano), Francesco Venturini (a Mirano City Councillor and delegate to peace politics), and Vincenzo Guanci, the coordinator of “Centro per la pace e la legalità” (City Association for Peace and Legality), sent a joint letter to all the municipalities in the Metropolitan City of Venice to invite them to join Mayors for Peace, explaining the aim of Mayors for Peace and how to join the network.

<Moissac, France>
Inauguration of a rock garden for peace
The town of Moissac in the region of Occitanie in Southern France is known for its white grapes and beautiful townscape including churches, an abbey and the town hall.

Moissac joined Mayors for Peace on December 1st last year through an invitation from a local citizens’ group named “Sentries of Peace”. This group highlights the importance of passing down the messages of the hibakusha of Hiroshima and Nagasaki to the younger generation and promotes an art activity involving stacking stones into towers as prayers for peace. The concept behind this is: “The stone towers symbolize the fragility of peace that must be protected and constantly rebuilt.” On October 24, the town inaugurated a rock garden built with this concept. Later, when the stone towers in this garden were destroyed by rain and wind, citizens spontaneously rebuilt them.

< Lasséran, France>
A day of peace events on Armistice Day

Lasséran is a French commune in the Occitanie Region with 350 inhabitants. Last year, Lasséran built a peace garden with the collaboration of a local citizens’ group named “Sentiers of Peace”.

On November 11, the day commemorating the end of WWI, Lasséran observed a day of peace events to inaugurate the new peace garden, which involved more than half of the population. Among the invited guests were Mr. Michel Cibot, the Executive Officer of AFCDRP-Maires pour la Paix France and Mrs. Miho Cibot, a Hiroshima Peace Ambassador.

The event began with a peace march from a square dedicated to Nobel Peace Prize laureates to the new peace garden. After a ribbon-cutting ceremony, children recited a poem and sang a song in front of a cenotaph for victims of the war. Ms. Cibot recited a French translation of a poem by an “Abombed poet”, a poet who survived an atomic bombing, and an African poet read his own poem.

An exhibition of peace art by local artists and children was held in the community’s cultural center, whose facade is inscribed with the lyrics of “Imagine” by John Lennon. There was a screening of “La bombe et nous”, a documentary on nuclear weapons, followed by a discussion between the film’s producer, AFCDRP’s Executive Officer, and the audience of approximately 100 people.

The day of peace events in Lasséran was reported on public television network and gained national attention.

“Peace News from Hiroshima”
(Provided by the Hiroshima Peace Media Center of the CHUGOKU SHIMBUN)

It has been learned that, as of the end of March 2019, the City of Hiroshima has identified the names of 89,025 victims of the atomic bombing who died between August 6, 1945, the day the U.S. dropped the bomb on the city, and the end of that year. There is a big gap, however, between this number and the typical estimate of total victims given by the city of 140,000 (+/- 10,000). This discrepancy illustrates how a large number of total victims remain unidentified even almost 75 years after the atomic bombing.

The number of victims measured by the City of Hiroshima is based on the city government’s survey of victims of the atomic bombing. The city government has been trying to find an accurate number of victims by comparing data from the survey and the estimated number of overall victims, which is 140,000 (+/- 10,000). But it has been difficult to glean information on victims from the Korean Peninsula, military personnel, or from families with no surviving members, according to the city.

The survey was launched in fiscal 1979, 34 years after the bombing, when there were increasing calls for efforts to investigate the actual extent of damage. The survey is still going on. To identify those who are alive and those who are dead among the victims, different sets of data have been used, including the register of the A-bomb victims kept in the stone chest under the Cenotaph for the A-bomb Victims, which was erected in 1952, as well as several different data compiled by the national and the prefectural governments. But there is still a long way to go.

The Chugoku Shimbun has begun running a long series of articles titled “Striving to fill voids in Hiroshima” to mark the 75th anniversary of the atomic bombing. What do we still not know? What can we do now to fill such “voids?” To help each and every victim regain their dignity, we will probe deeply into the actual damage.
