Continue Talking Hiroshima

On August 6, 1945, I was a 13-year-old eighth grade student and a member of the Student Mobilization Program. We students were starting our first day of work decoding messages at the military headquarters 1,8 kilometers from the hypocenter. We were on the second floor of a wooden building. At 8:15 a.m.,

A photograph of the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Park. The view is framed by a large, grey, curved concrete archway. In the foreground, a dark grey stone monument with Japanese inscriptions sits on a gravel path. Behind it is a rectangular pond with a low concrete wall. In the background, the A-Bomb Dome (Atomic Bomb Dome) is visible, surrounded by lush green trees. A modern building with a glass facade is also visible in the distance. The sky is overcast.
